JILL HAMBERG
Urban Planning, Research and Policy

Jill Hamberg is an urban planner specializing in applied research, evaluation, and policy analysis in the fields of housing, homelessness and community needs assessment. In addition to professional work, she has taught for decades at New York City area colleges, including 19 years at SUNY Empire State College, and she is currently a Visiting Professor at Pratt Institute in the Graduate Center for Planning and the Environment. She also worked at universities in Latin America for four years. She has significant experience in providing technical assistance to community-based organizations and prepared a research guide for community organizing. Jill holds a PhD in Urban Planning from Columbia University, a Master of City Planning (MCP) degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and a bachelor's from the University of Michigan.
